This Spring, TWP Lecturing Fellow Nicolette Cagle will offer a new Service Learning course, Writing 20: From Woods to Words - Evaluating Environmental Education Materials across the USA, supported by course enhancement funds from the Duke’s Service-Learning Program. In From Woods to Words, students will engage in real-world research, surveying the types of environmental education materials used nature centers across the United States. They will also work with the guidance of local conservation scientists to create professional environmental education posters to be displayed at the North Carolina Botanical Garden in Chapel Hill. This project will culminate in reception at the North Carolina Botanical Garden, where they students will present their work to both the scientists that helped them complete it and the broader community.
