My students and I are "curating" a Scoop-it website with my students this semester. I ask them to post links to sources related to their final papers, with a short paragraph explaining/summarizing the link and how it connects to their project. My aim was to provide a space for them to share their topics with other sections, and a broader audience, along with the opportunity to share non-traditional sources.